PERSONALIZED SUMMARY

What your free report already shows

These points are based on your four zodiac animals and Five Elements.

FIRST READ

Overall balance

Alex, your chart reveals a grounded, standards-driven person who values fairness and clarity. Your outer side shows a Wood Pig—warm and generous, but with a hidden stubborn streak. Under pressure, the Earth Ox side takes over: methodical, patient, and quietly determined. Your inner self is a Metal Dog—loyal, honest, and deeply principled, especially in relationships. And your future direction is a Water Horse—restless for freedom and new experiences. The strongest element in your chart is Earth, making you stable and reliable, but Fire is weak, so you may struggle to express passion or assert yourself boldly. This combination means you often hold back your own needs to keep the peace, then feel unappreciated. You were the responsible kid early on, the one who followed rules and expected others to do the same. At work, you prefer clear instructions and hate chaos. In love, you need honesty and predictability, but you also secretly crave adventure.

easygoing, like a Wood Pig—generous, sociable, and a bit indulgent. You come across as someone who enjoys life and doesn't take things too seriously. But don't be fooled: underneath that soft exterior, you have strong opinions and can be surprisingly immovable when your values are challenged. You may have learned early to hide your stubbornness behind a smile, especially around family.

When deadlines loom or stress hits, you become the Earth Ox: steady, persistent, and quietly grinding. You don't panic or complain; you just put your head down and get it done. This makes you a reliable team member, but it also means you can be too rigid, sticking to a plan even when it's not working. You may resist asking for help, preferring to carry the load alone until you burn out.

At your core, you are a Metal Dog—loyal, principled, and fiercely protective of those you trust. You need honesty and consistency in relationships; betrayal or flakiness cuts deep. You often put others' needs first, but secretly you want to be seen and appreciated for your efforts. In close relationships, you can be blunt when disappointed, but you're also the first to forgive if the other person shows genuine effort.

Deep down, you have a Water Horse spirit—a restless desire for freedom, adventure, and new experiences. This side of you may feel suppressed by your responsible Earth and Metal sides. You crave spontaneity but often talk yourself out of it, choosing safety over excitement. As you get older, this hidden drive may push you to take more risks, travel, or change careers. The key is to let it out in small, manageable ways.

FIVE ELEMENTS

Element Balance

Your strongest element is Earth, making you stable, practical, and trustworthy. Your weakest is Fire, which means you can struggle with visibility, passion, and asserting yourself. The Earth gives you patience and endurance, but too much can make you stubborn and resistant to change. The lack of Fire may cause you to hold back your opinions or avoid the spotlight, even when you have something important to say. Balancing Fire would help you express your needs more directly and take bold action when it counts.

Metal

Metal is your day element, giving you a sharp, analytical mind. You value logic and precision, and you hate sloppy work. This helps you in careers that require attention to detail, but it can also make you overly critical of yourself and others. You may set impossibly high standards and then feel frustrated when reality falls short.

Wood

Wood is present in your outer side, giving you flexibility and a desire for growth. You like learning new things and exploring ideas, but your Earth side often pulls you back to routine. You may start projects with enthusiasm but struggle to finish them if they require long-term discipline. The key is to channel your Wood creativity into structured outlets.

Water

23%

Water is in your future direction, giving you intuition and adaptability. You can read people well and navigate social situations with ease when you trust your gut. However, Water can also make you indecisive, especially when you're torn between responsibility and freedom. You may find yourself overthinking choices that others make quickly.

Fire

Fire is your weakest element, so you may lack natural drive for attention or recognition. You prefer to work behind the scenes and let results speak for themselves. This can be a strength in humble service, but it also means you might miss opportunities because you didn't promote yourself. Learning to step into the spotlight occasionally will open doors.

Earth

51%

Earth dominates your chart, making you the rock in any group. You are dependable, patient, and grounded. People trust you to follow through, and you rarely let them down. The downside is that you can become too set in your ways, resistant to change, and overly cautious. You may stay in a comfortable but unfulfilling situation because the unknown feels risky.

The percentages are a relative distribution of the five elements in your birth data. They are not scores, rankings or good/bad marks.

PERSONALITY

Personality Blueprint

Natural Thinking Style

You think in a structured, logical way, because your Metal Dog inner self demands clarity and consistency. You prefer to weigh pros and cons before making decisions, and you dislike ambiguity. This makes you a great planner, but it can also lead to analysis paralysis. You may overthink small choices because you want to get them 'right'.

Emotional Pattern

You tend to keep your emotions in check, showing a calm exterior even when you're upset. Because Earth is strong, you absorb stress rather than release it. When you finally do express anger, it can come out as blunt criticism. You feel emotions deeply but need time to process them alone. You may withdraw from conflict to avoid saying something you'll regret.

Hidden Potential

Your hidden potential lies in your Water Horse future direction—a spontaneous, adventurous side that you often suppress. If you can learn to balance your cautious Earth with the Horse's love of freedom, you could become someone who takes calculated risks and explores new horizons. This could manifest as travel, a career change, or a creative hobby that brings you joy.

REAL LIFE PATTERNS

Common patterns in daily life

PERSONALITY

How you usually react

Loyal and dependable in relationships and work. Patient and persistent under pressure. Fair-minded and principled. Practical and detail-oriented. Good at creating stability and order.

RELATIONSHIPS

How you get along with close people

In relationships, you are loyal and protective, but you also need honesty and reliability. Because your Metal Dog pattern is active, you value trust above all else. You are not one for casual flings or superficial friendships—you invest deeply in a few people. You may struggle to open up at first, but once you commit, you are all in. Your challenge is to communicate your needs early, before resentment builds.

STUDY / WORK

How you work best

You are a steady, reliable worker who thrives on clear expectations and routine. Because your Earth Ox pattern is active, you work best in structured environments with defined roles. You dislike chaos, last-minute changes, or vague instructions. You may take on too much responsibility because you trust yourself more than others. In a team, you're the one who keeps everyone on track.

GROWTH

What to pay attention to Practice saying 'no' to protect your energy, because your Earth side tends to overgive. Let yourself be seen: share your opinions even if they're not perfect, because your weak Fire needs exercise. Embrace small risks: try something new each month to feed your hidden Horse's need for adventure. When stressed, step back before reacting—your bluntness can hurt those you care about. Balance your high standards with self-compassion; not everything needs to be perfect.
